„For us, sustainability and economic efficiency are not a matter of course, but rather a matter of hand in hand. By taking responsibility for the value chain, we create trust - today and for future generations.“ Stefanie Hirsch (Dräger Annual Report 2025)

Dear business partners,

Today I would like to reach out to you because we want to work together with you, our business partners, to further develop our business relationship in a sustainable way. At Dräger we are convinced that long-term business success can only be achieved in harmony with sustainable economic practices. For generations, we have been developing “Technology for Life”. Protecting, supporting and saving life inspires us to perform at our best every day and makes us proud. We combine our many years of expertise with our commitment to a sustainable future.

'We connect people care and planet care' reflects this self-understanding. Together with our employees, but also with you, our business partners, we want to contribute to ensuring that people live in a healthier, safer and more environmentally friendly world today and tomorrow.

Our systems and processes are designed to preserve resources and prevent potential risks arising from our business activities. At the same time, it is clear that we must continue to evolve in order to meet changing business and environmental conditions as well as changing regulatory requirements. As part of this development, we are committed to creating greater transparency regarding the contribution of our business partners and their supply chains.

To achieve this, we at Dräger have decided to conduct individual sustainability assessments of our suppliers using the EcoVadis platform. This assessment not only gives you the opportunity to demonstrate your sustainability efforts within the supply chain, but also to present them transparently to your customers and external stakeholders.
